Competitor Analysis Framework

Positioning & Gap Audit

Competitor analysis is useless if it stops at a feature table. This framework ends with a decision: where you compete, and where you deliberately do not.

What's inside

- Direct vs indirect competitor mapping
- Positioning grid construction
- Channel and content gap analysis
- Pricing and packaging comparison
- Opportunity scoring matrix

Define The Set

- 01 Separate direct, indirect, and substitute competitors
- 02 Include the "do nothing" option as a competitor
- 03 Limit deep analysis to five — more produces noise
- 04 Refresh the set annually

Positioning

- 01 Capture each competitor's claim in their own words
- 02 Plot the set on the two axes buyers actually care about
- 03 Identify crowded quadrants and empty space
- 04 Test whether empty space is opportunity or lack of demand

Channels & Content

- 01 Record where each competitor invests visibly
- 02 Identify topics they rank for that you do not
- 03 Note channels nobody in the category is using well
- 04 Estimate their content cadence and depth

Decide

- 01 Score opportunities on winnability and value
- 02 Pick one position to own and state it plainly
- 03 Decide explicitly what you will not compete on
- 04 Set a review date to reassess
