Marketing OKR Template

Quarterly Planning Pack

Most marketing OKRs are activity lists in disguise. This template forces outcome-based key results and a cadence that catches drift early.

What's inside

- Objective vs key result distinction
- Key result formulas that avoid vanity
- Scoring rubric and grading
- Weekly check-in agenda
- End-of-quarter retrospective format

Write Objectives

- 01 Qualitative, ambitious, and time-bound to the quarter
- 02 Maximum three objectives per team
- 03 Must connect to a company-level goal
- 04 Avoid objectives that are really projects

Write Key Results

- 01 Numeric, with a baseline and a target
- 02 Measure outcomes, never tasks completed
- 03 Three to five per objective
- 04 If it cannot be measured weekly, reconsider it

Run The Cadence

- 01 15-minute weekly check-in on confidence, not status
- 02 Flag any key result below 50% confidence immediately
- 03 Mid-quarter reset is allowed; silent abandonment is not
- 04 Keep the scoreboard visible to the whole team

Close The Quarter

- 01 Score every key result 0.0 to 1.0
- 02 0.7 average is healthy — 1.0 means targets were too safe
- 03 Document what you learned, not just what you scored
- 04 Carry forward only what still matters
